

All morality comes from God. God either places the morality in our hearts and/or by the Holy Spirit. Also, by His words (The Bible) and His actions He made and continues to make morality known. Jesus said, "Only God is truly good." Only God has the authority, goodness, and wisdom to determine what is right and what is wrong. God is perfect. He has never sinned. God made everything and everyone.

If there is no God, then there is no one who has the authority, goodness, or wisdom to make moral commandments.

Since atheists believe there is no God, they have no authority to make any moral or ethical statements. They only have the opinions of people, governments, and societies. All people have sinned. Everyone has made mistakes in wisdom or judgment. No human being, except Christ/God, has ever been perfect. No one, but God is truly good. Mark 10:18 ""No one is good-except God alone." Governments and societies are made up of people.

Can a country make moral commandments? No. Countries like Germany have killed millions.

Can a society or culture make moral commandments? No. Some cultures have believed in cannibalism and other immoralities.

Can courts make moral commandments? No. Many courts in the history of man have made evil and immoral judgments?

If God doesn't exist, then all we have is human opinion. Human opinions conflict and are contradictory about what is right and what is wrong. We have no absolutes without God; only opinions. Without God, who can say that one opinion is better than another?

If there is no God, Christians and all religions have no authority. This would be because the religious base their morals and authority on an entity that doesn't exist.

God does exist.

Since God exists, God makes all commandments about morality and ethics.

Christians constantly state that only God is the final judgment on people. Since only God can be the final judge, only God can state what is moral.

Since God exists, people who believe in God can state what God commands. All authority comes from God.

Matthew 28:18 "Then Jesus came to them and said, "All authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me."

John 5:27 "And he has given him authority to judge because he is the Son of Man."

John 17:12 "For you granted him authority over all people that he might give eternal life to all those you have given him."

Romans 13:1 "for there is no authority except that which God has established. The authorities that exist have been established by God."

Ephesians 1:20-22 “which he exerted in Christ when he raised him from the dead and seated him at his right hand in the heavenly realms, far above all rule and authority, power and dominion, and every title that can be given, not only in the present age but also in the one to come. And God placed all things under his feet and appointed him to be head over everything for the church.”

Colossians 2:12 “Christ, who is the head over every power and authority.”

If someone doesn't believe in God, he only has a human opinion about morality; therefore, atheists cannot make any authoritative comments about morality or ethics.

Do you disagree with this? If you disagree, then tell me who other than God has the authority to determine morality? Who will take the place of God to judge everyone when they die? The Supreme Court? Would you want the Supreme Court to decide your eternity?

If a Christian disagrees with this, then they are calling God a liar.

If an atheist disagrees with this, then they have no authority.

Furthermore, to elaborate on Darwin's beliefs, the beliefs of many who founded evolutionary thought, and many atheist biologists and evolutionists; morality and ethics are simply a chemical reaction in the brain and/or body and nothing more.
